Rand's Growing Family

Four New Faces Ready to Help With Your Upcoming Fall Projects

In the past couple of months, we have added four new faces to our working family. Each comes to us with different experiences, and will add to both the quality and experience customers have come to expect from our staff.

Mark Abbott has been at Rand for 2 months. He can be found most often working the edger or in the planing mill. We caught up with him on a sunny day moving mulch piles and asked him his thoughts on working at Rand. His greatest pleasure at Rand is the opportunity to work outdoors much of the time. He is an outdoor person, and returned to New England after spending time working in mills in Wisconsin, New York and Pennsylvania. After traveling around for a bit, (and attending college for theater and psychology no less!), he returned to his home in New England and came to work at Rand after his brother, Steve, began working in the mill.

great diversity of experience, from having his own tree farm, to being a consulting forester, to manufacturing quarter sawn clapboards, to working for FEMA. He is also an accomplished photographer in his spare time.

Of all the new faces, Mark McPherson may be the easiest to find. Mark works primarily in the front sales office with Doug and Jim. In fact, it is often Mark who answers incoming phone calls and takes care of emailed orders. He enjoys assisting customers and making sure orders are put up correctly and Steve Abbott has been a friend of the Rand family for years. He was familiar with the Rand Lumber mill, and therefore, jumped at the opportunity to come work in the mill. He often runs the edger, squaring up boards coming off the milling process. He monitors the three steps of debarking, sawing and grading, making sure the lumber is being stacked correctly and graded accurately. Like many of our crew, Steve enjoys the outdoors, working part-time at his family's campground, and getting away for camping weekends with his wife and two boys, ages 3 and 17.

promptly. Having started his time with Rand in the mill operation, he is able to talk knowledgeably with customers about all of Rand's products. He is amazing at multi-tasking, and is

Stephen Jeffery is our newest employee, having started at Rand in the last two weeks. He, too, can be found often in the planer area of the mill. He comes to us with a learning web design and computer networking. His hobbies include computers and traveling with his wife.

Please join the Rand family in welcoming these new, valuable employees to our workforce. We are proud to have the most knowledgeable staff on the seacoast, and always welcome your questions on the best materials for your upcoming projects.
