Rand Helps Fulfill a Dream

Rick Higgins, a long-time employee of Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, has one love (other than his wife Linda) and that is to have animals. Not a dog or a cat, which they already have, but beef cattle, goats, turkeys... a farm. You see, Rick and Linda once had a farm at their home in Maine, until Rick's job with the Shipyard brought them to Japan. And it was the desire to have that again that got Rick through his 10 months there. And that's where Rand Lumber comes in.

Rick has always lived in Rye, and his wife's family vacationed on the New Hampshire Seacoast, and so when the time came to purchase lumber for their new barn, there was no question where to go. Rand is a family, Higgins is a family, Linda says about why they use Rand.

Everyone knows you, is willing to give you what you want, and is willing to get it for you.

Once they had the lumber, the time came to build the barn. And what better way to do that, then with a good old fashioned barn raising? On a beautiful summer day, the Higgins family, brothers and, sisters, nieces, and nephews, got together and in two days the barn was pretty much built! The only work left to be done later was a lean-to to allow the animals to get out of the weather, and to build the stalls inside.

Rick will be getting his new animals this spring, so his new farm, which was just a dream not long ago, will be up and running soon. And Rand Lumber is happy to help make it come true.

Rand Entertains Rye 2nd Graders

Rand Lumber recently had the honor of explaining our operations to Mrs. Hodsdon's 2nd grade class from Rye Elementary School. The kids were impressed by the size of the mill, many never realizing it was here even though they'd been to Rand Lumber's showroom with their parents. Probably the most memorable part of the trip was the explanation of the kiln drying process. The kids took turns checking out the kiln, and feeling the effects of the warm air on their skin. Thanks again to the parent chaperones who made this trip possible!

If your class or group is interested in learning more about the milling process, please call Jim at 436-4438 to schedule a tour!
